College, State Construction Again Lumpd In Bond Plan

Ten days from today the legislature will reconvene in Sacramento for the third special session this year.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown has called the session to consider resubmitting Proposition 3, the $270,000,000 state construction proposition, to the voters in November. They turned it down June 5 by about a million votes.

But the governor and many others, in education and out, think that the voters did not understand that 80 per cent of the construction bonds were earmarked for higher education construction. They hint broadly that someone must have sabotaged the bond issue because neither the title nor the ballot explanation of the bond issue even mentioned schools.

If the governor is looking for a patsy to take the blame for it not being mentioned, he might take a look in the mirror. The title and the wording on the ballot were provided in the bill, SB 31, authored by Senator Hugo Fisher (D, San Diego). It was introduced as an administration measure, pushed through with approval of the governor and signed into law by the governor. Clearly he had full knowledge of what the ballot said.

When we endorsed Proposition 3 before the election, we said "we're sorry the education construction funds and the state government construction funds got all mixed up in this bond issue."

Unfortunately, it looks as though the governor will again lump them all together. In calling the special session, he said he will ask the legislature "to place a new bond issue for higher education and for construction of state prisons and mental institutions on the November ballot. A new bond measure is being drafted and there will be some amendments. They will not, however, change the basic character and purpose of the bond issue.

So once again it appears the college buildings and the governmental buildings will be all mixed up in one bond issue.

However, the legislature may alter any legislation the governor submits. Perhaps they, in their wisdom, will separate the bond issue into two or more propositions, eliminate the conflict and let the voters face clear cut issues.

But what of the other defeated bond proposals? Will the governor also allow the solons to discuss putting the beaches and parks bond issue back on the ballot? How about housing for the aged and handicapped?

He has not yet issued the "official call" for the legislature. This will designate exactly what they can discuss. We'll just have to wait and see.

But the consensus among old-timers who are acquainted with Alcatraz Island and surrounding waters is that the three missing convicts probably never made it to shore.

Here's the theory: Water too cold, current too swift, and men confined inside are the elements. Besides, the island looks small from this side, but once you get there, there are hundreds of crevices and caves where men can hide. In other words, they rock. Or drowned.

Safest road ever built for advertisers

Ads are vehicles for carrying ideas and values to the public. And a newspaper is a road to readership.

How far can your ads go? How many homes will actually get your message? Is the road patrolled, mapped and measured for you-or does it merely claim to go "somewhere?"

There's only one way you can know: ask a newspaper for verified paid circulation figures. Ask for the impartial Audit Bureau of Circulations reports. If a paper can't supply them, you know its circulation is a claim made by the newspaper itself. If it can, your investment is on sound ground.

For ABC reports are the nationally recognized road signs to sound circulation. They are set up, not by the newspaper, but by the trained field auditors of ABC. They trace circulation to its exact sources. They show exactly where it goes and how it got there.

Above all, they give you the single best measure of reader confidence - that a newspaper worth reading is worth paying for.

As a member of ABC, the Independent-Journal invites you, anytime, to ask for these official, published reports of our paid circulation. They mark the safest road ever built for advertisers.

Meet 'Mayor Art' Of San Anselmo

He Keeps Finger On Hub Pulse

By HARRY CRAFT

If there is anyone who keeps a finger on the downtown pulse of San Anselmo, it must be Arthur W. Smith.

He is one man who can stand on the corner of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and Bank Street and be midway between home and workeach no more than a block away in opposite directions.

Even without his 19 years as a city councilman this would make him a pretty good bet to know what is going on in the Hub.

Those years since 1943 eight of them as mayorwould be an enviable record in any city. Though the mayoralty has been passed on to others since 1960, it earned him an honorarium. He still bears the affectionate title of "Mayor Art" to most residents. His vibrations are attuned to civic interests and his manner is "bedside."

THAT IS TO say he neither plunges into the extremes of crusadism nor holds obstinately to the status quo. He occupies that middle ground of analysis, calculated results and give and take. To many, he is a comfortable man to have around when there is a major issue at stake.

Men trimmed to this pattern are usually the result of a combined background in business and human relations, for there is hard logic in one and often a lack of it in the other. If there is any doubt, a term or two on a city council can be enlightening.

But Mayor Art is far from being a negative personality.

"He is quiet and reserved, but not without sparkle," one of his former colleagues describes him. "He handles things with fairness and intelligence. Everyone who knows him, likes him."

There are two ways of appraising "what is going on" in a community. One is to view it objectively from a ringside seat. The other is to become a member of the cast. In spite of Art Smith's conveniently located variety store across from the city hall, his home across the boulevard and the many vantage points nearby and in between, he is not by nature a "corner

"I've lived in San Anselmo since 1938," he says. "But it wasn't until 1941 that I gave up my dyeing business in San Francisco and joined my father in the Ben Franklin Store here. This started my getting into things. Then Earl White resigned from the city council two years later and I was appointed to fill out his term. I've never regretted it. It's been an education money couldn't buy."

ART'S PENCHANT for "getting into things" has been multifarious. He is what some people call a "joiner."

"In fact, I've joined so many organizations I can't remember all of them," he admits freely. "Of course you have to realize I got into a lot of them before coming to Ma-

AT THE HEIGHT of his career as mayor of San Anselmo and city councilman, Arthur W. Smith looked the part. He was one of the Hub City's best liked officials and consistently racked up a high popularity vote at the polls few others have been able to equal

'I Like To Know People,' Says Art Smith Of Hub City

"I like to know people. I don't mean superficially or in great numbers, but how they think, what they do and how they do it, together and individually."

The list of these associations is an imposing one. It includes the Fairfax Lodge of Masons, Sciots in Marin County, Marin County Shrine Club, Islaam Temple of the Shrine, California Consistory of Scottish Rite, California Commandery of Knight Templar, Odd Fellows, Druids, Native Sons, San Rafael Lodge of Elks, San Rafael Eagles (of which he is past president), Kentfield Lions Club, San Anselmo Rotary Club, San Anselmo Chamber of Commerce (he was first president after its reorganization in 1945), affiliations with charity drives and fund raising campaigns.

"There are still more," he says, thumbing through his membership cards, but the point had been well established.

Art was born in Los Angeles and his family settled in Chico when he was 11. There he lived and went to school until 1920 when he left home to attend Heald's Business College in San Francisco and study bookkeeping.

He says he worked before and after school in his father's furniture store in Chico and did not have much time to play, so his entry into the retail business was an early one.

"In San Francisco I applied for a bookkeeping job in the old Buckley Cleaning and Dyeing Works," he related. "When Buckley sold out to a national chain in 1922, I took over the dyeing part.

"THEN I HAD a siege of arthritis and rheumatic fever and was in the hospital for six months. When I came out I bought the dyeing business, holding it until 1941."

During that time in San Francisco Art had married, but his wife died and he was left with the upbringing of their daughter Arlene (Mrs. George Carli, now living in Terra Linda).

His father, John A. Smith, opened the Ben Franklin Store in San Anselmo in 1933.

"It was a poor opening, according to dad's diary," Art relates. "The reason was given as 'inclement weather.' Other times when business was off the entry would read: 'Sales today were a flop' or something more pithy."

On his father's death, Art entered into partnership with his mother and managed the store, taking it over completely when she died in 1955. He also opened a branch in Kentfield in 1950 but closed it in 1959.

He had remarried in 1945 to Alma Campredon, a widow whom he had known in San Francisco before the death of her husband.

Alma captured almost as much publicity as her new husband—but in a different field. As majorette of a girls' drum corps for the Italian Catholic Federation No. 23, she led her group into a series of first awards in public appearances throughout Northern California. Over the years she has helped him in the store, now known as Art Smith's Variety Store, doing most of the buying.

ART HAD BEEN re-elected to the city council in 1944 and during the ensuing four-year term was made police commissioner, a post that found him at odds with Police Chief Donald T. Wood. Under civil service Wood was not subject to direct supervision

ART SMITH is proud of his wartime association with San Anselmo's Reserve Police Force. The group turned in its badges in 1948 when the city council decided it was no longer needed as a unit in city protection.

In the middle of the tempest came the election of 1948 in which Art took well over half the votes cast, returning to the council table. A more controversial character, Mrs. Carmel Booth, joined him at the council table that year as its first woman member. Heretofore, she had been an ardent council critic and a regular attendant at its meetings. Art was elected mayor by the council, replacing Frank Monte who was retir-and it was inevitable that she. even more than he, would clash with Police Chief Wood.

His first year as a mayor was fraught with conflicts: Councilmen Richard E. Love and Cecil Allen faced a recall election; Wood filed a suit against Mrs. Booth, Mayor Smith and others for malicious conspiracy in connection with the charges brought against him in 1947; more ado about secret meetings, civil service and the council's own attitude toward Wood.

But Love and Allen held their offices in the election, and Wood's suit was eventually dropped, Mrs. Booth was transferred from police commissioner to chairman of the streets committee, bruised feelings were soothed, and the state of the city returned to some degree of normalcy.

TO AN OUTSIDER looking backward at these events it must seem that everyone involved in them on both sides set out to create a series of problems so they could have the satisfaction of solving them-with Mayor Art Smith caught in the middle.

For a time they whetted a sharp edge to the blade of Art's temperament. He felt he had conducted himself fairly, an opinion apparently shared by many residents, though a few believed he had let them down. It could have been that this group misjudged their man. He advocated efficiency in city government but was inherently opposed to creating unfavorable sensationalism, preferring to get things as a return controversy over Chief Wood's civil service and retirement status, the "Battle of the Leash Law" and business and contracting licenses. In these Art invariably had firm convictions of his own and stated them without fanfare. If it appeared to some that he backed away when the issues caught on fire, they are far outnumbered by those who hotly reject any implications that he is a "straddler."

The Smiths keep a scrapbook. In it are clippings of some of the most hectic disturbances over Art's years of office. These, however, are pasted in no precise chronological order and apparently were assembled sometime after the events actually transpired. Dates of 1948 and 1957 share space on the same page. Some are undated.

Is Summer Camp Best For Your Child?

HANDICRAFT is just one of the many interesting activities offered youngsters in Marin summer camps. Here little Suzanne Fillingame concentrates on a project at the Marin Jewish Community Center's Camp Rafa-El.

THE SMILING FACE of little Pat Conway reflects the pleasures of accomplishment which the children enjoy when they master a handicraft project in summer camp. She had been working with modeling clay.

Once Again It's Time Of Year When Many Marin Parents Must Make That Decision

By DON KEOWN

Summer camp—who needs it?

Well, admit the men and women in charge of the several camps which operate in Marin, not all boys and girls.

Some are better off in summer school, at home with parents and playmates, working at summer jobs, participating in local recreational programs, etc.

But, say the people who head the agencies which conduct Marin camps, there are also many Marin children who will derive great benefits from participation in camping programs.

Louis Maier, executive director of the Marin Jewish Community Center's Camp Rafa-El, says that the first prerequisite is that the child should want to go to camp.

"We feel that the child should meet the camp director at the time of registration to make the camping experience a more enjoyable one," he says.

If the child is especially reluctant to leave the family fold or develops a feeling of rejection because the parents are contemplating sending him to an overnight camp, then the answer, Maier points out, might lie in the direction of a day camp. Then the child can still spend evenings at home and only gradually develop the independence that camping provides.

WHAT ARE SOME of the groups of children for whom camping offers maximum benefits?

One group is made up of children who, if they remained at home during the vacation months, would be isolated without playmates.

Another is the group which has a particular need for training in a skill or a special interest in a field. For instance, the child might want to take advantage of the nature lore studies stressed by almost all the camps. Or he might want to learn to swim — another instructional feature at virtually all Marin camps.

Perhaps the child needs the opportunity to mingle with other youngsters his own age in order to learn to get along with children. Or perhaps the child will benefit from doing things for himself—the handicraft activities, preparing his own food, etc.—in order to bolster his self-confidence.

NOR DOES MAIER feel that the "baby-sitting" aspect of summer camps is entirely bad.

"There is some truth to the charge that many children are sent to camp to get them off their parents' hands during the summer months," Maier says. "Perhaps that isn't as bad as it seems.

"It is too easily assumed that such children are rejected children—ones who aren't loved, who are a nuisance to their parents. But this need not be the case. In Marin there are many homes where both parents must work, and where there is no opportunity for a family vacation. Certainly, a good camp is a better solution than a babysitter. And it provides that child with an outing that has many of the aspects of a vacation trip."

Lou Albrecht, executive director of the YMCA which provides many camping opportunities for Marin youngsters, feels that the wide diversity of camping programs offered in Marin is all to the good.

"Different camps meet different needs of children," he says.

For instance, both the camp restricted to boys or to girls and the camp open to both boys and girls serve sound purposes.

"The boys' camp, for instance, is most helpful to the boy who is surrounded by sisters, or the boy who does not have a father in the home," Albrecht says. "The co-ed camp is excellent for the only child, the boy without sisters, or the girl who has no brothers."

The people who head Marin's camping programs point out that they are continually experiment in g with and broadening their activities. A number of agencies have planned their camps to allow time for their campers to attend summer school. Virtually all camps arrange sessions so that the child can also join the family for vacation trips.

Dorothy Earthly, executive director of Marin County Girl Scouts, points with pride to that organization's new "Heritage Trail" program offering hiking experience to the 12 to 17-year-olds. It is, she says, typical of the new services being developed by Marin camps.

And, she adds, Marin camps are continuously working on better staff training methods, better staffs, improved sites and facilities, closer contacts with parents, etc.

The camp leaders agree that one of the best ways for parents to learn about a particular camp is to consult other parents whose children have already participated in the program.

ANOTHER recommended approach is to call at the sponsoring agency's head-quarters and discuss its camping program.

The Marin Council of Community Services also serves as a clearinghouse for much information and is happy to help parents with camping data.

It's the time of the year in which scores of parents once again are faced with the question: Should they or should they not enroll their child in an overnight or day camp? If the final answer is "yes," then those parents can be thankful that they live in Marin where the summer outdoor opportunities for their children are unexcelled.

PARTICIPATION IN summer camp programs often helps a child to learn to mingle with and get along with other youngsters. It also serves to get him or her out in the fresh air. Here a group of youngsters from the Marin Jewish Community Center's Camp Rafa-El enjoy their lunches in the outdoors.

WE'RE PLAYING THE NUMBERS - AND LOSING

Being a determined maverick, I've paid little heed to statistics, to the profound horror of my counterparts in the automobile business. While other business managers waxed enthusiastic and with eloquence over trends, graphs, and percentages, giving cause and effect to these hieroglyphics as a sure fire guide to management, I carefully filed them away in the historical archives file, rolled up my sleeves, and scratched for new and more business.

From this scratching and scrounging came new profits. new costs, and a whole new set of statistics. The one statistic that still fascinates me is that little figure hanging on the very end of the page, with the always too few digits left of the decimal point the net profit. This was the only item, you see, that could be used for capital expenditures or maybe, even carried to the bank with fond hope more was to follow.

There is one set of figures, however, which gives me pause and makes me regret my woeful inexperience with numbers to effect a quick solution to the problem. Checking registrations of new Fords to residents of Marin County during April, 1962, one discovers out of 134 new Fords sold, 44 were sold to Marin residents by dealers OUTSIDE of Marin County.

It is difficult to believe these 44 individuals, many of whom obviously earn their livelihood here, and may even operate local business establishments, took the time to check prices and items locally before they made their purchase. It is more difficult still to accept any claim that we were OUT-TRADED 44 times out of 134 by dealers whose comparatively staggering overhead precludes the acceptance of a deal unless the profit margin is at least $100.00 greater than the minimum deal at Ames Ford.

The new Fords in Marin are exactly the same as those offered for sale in San Francisco. and the prices are obviously lower. Why, then, did 44 Marinites buy outside the county? Better service? Hardly. Ford Motor Company has awarded Ames Ford with their Distinguished Achievement Award, an honor not given indiscriminately. Then, the answer is apparent. We have failed to tell our story effectively and with sufficient conviction.

The sleeves will be rolled up again, Ames Ford will be heard.

SWIMMING IS A POPULAR pastime at almost every summer camp operating in Marin County. And for many youngsters these programs offer an ideal opportunity for swimming instruction under the guidance of expert instructors. This group of campers takes a break from the swimming pool to rest and absorb a little sunshine.

Any Summer Jobs For Students?

The 1931-62 school term number from Marin high ended in Marin County this week - and thousands of students turned their attention from studies to summer jobs.

It is estimated that the schools and colleges exceeds 5,000 with most of them eager for work for the full 11 weeks they will be free from their classrooms.

Some of the more fortunate students have already landed summer jobs. But the number still available for suitable employment is sizeable.

Each year the Marin County Youth Employment Committee tackles the job of stimulating public interest in the summer employment of these young people. To achieve its goal the committee works in cooperation with the California State Employment

Summer Jobs For Students

Continued from Page M-8 Service, business and labor groups, the Marin Council of Community Services, newspapers and radio stations, and church, social, service, parent, youth and school organizations.

WITH ACTIVE participation from these groups but with the major portion of the actual work being done by students, in the past month many thousands of envelopes have been stuffed, addressed, and mailed to employers; letters and notices have been written and mailed to various community groups; posters have been placed in store windows; and many students have made talks before service clubs encouraging prospective employers to hire a youth for the summer.

Having registered the students and counseled, tested, interviewed many of them, the California State Employment Service stands ready to accept job orders from employers and to fill these orders with qualified young people.

The County Youth Employment Committee, since its inception in 1954, has continued to grow and increase its activities. This year the 15 persons on the committee represent a cross section of various community groups.

The committee is headed by Ed Ayer, Bob Souza, and Leslie Draper from the California State Employment Service. Other members are:

Mrs. Adele Alpers, president of the Marin Council of Community Services; Mrs. Wilma Arnold, personnel manager of Macy's; Donald Anderson, assistant manager of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.; Walter Busher, Marin County Probation Department; Norman B. Campbell, business agent for the Carpenter's Union No. 35; Jules Chourre Jr., San Rafael High School counselor; Dr. Virgil Hollis, county superintendent of schools; Mrs. Robin Galloway, president of the 14th District, Parent-Teachers Assn. Council; Robert Maher, coordinator of work experience for the Tamalpais Union High School District; Ken Moser, recording secretary for the Laborers' Union Local No. 291; Sheriff Louis Mountanos; Betty Presley, director of the Marin County Welfare Department. and Mrs. Florence T. Scott, executive director of the Marin Council of Community Services.

THE COMMITTEE is not appealing for jobs on the basis of need alone. Members point out that young people have much to offer employers: They are enthusiastic, they learn quickly, they provide a fresh outlook and new ideas, and they respond easily to supervision.

Student placement services are available during regular business hours at the California State Employment Service at 805 E Street, San Rafael.

MARIN CLEANERS of San Rafael, Bel Aire & Fairfax

"CAN I REMOVE RUST STAINS?"

There are several rust removers on the market prepared for home use on garments. Some are paste, some liquid, some cream. They will remove metallic stains. In most cases, they contain dilute solutions of acidscitries, tartaric, oxolic or hydrofluoric. If you read the instructions carefully, and you should for your protection, you'll see the manufacturer cautions you to treat the metallic stains before washing or cleaning. They also say that you should rinse the fabric thoroughly after the stain disappears, to completely remove the acid.

We have seen repeated cases where the customer has failed to rinse the acid completely from the fabric. As a result, damage has occurred later when the garment was sent to the drycleaner.

Your drycleaner is skilled in rust removal. He has the equipment to do it expertly, completely and satisfactorily. Why should you bother with buying a rust remover, treating the stain, and making certain the acid is rinsed thoroughly when your drycleaner will do it perfectly for you? # Two Sculptors Dot A Tiburon Hillside With Their Work

By BRUCE COLEMAN

The simple life is being practiced by two sculptors living under some bay trees atop a windy hill in Tiburon.

They are Marr Grounds, 31, stepson of former Belvedere Mayor Seymour Yardley Warner, and Ron Boise, 30, a sculptor whose favorite material is the tin from old

"We are not trying to prove anything or fight society," both men explained. "We're just living."

They have been given permission by the county to camp on the 10 acres, they said, and by the landowner to sculpt and carry out research in types of architecture compatible with the land.

The camp, behind a huge outcropping of rock off a dirt road called Gilmartin Drive, is screened from winds by a patchwork of tarpaulins and an orange and white parachute. The men describe the area as "space enough to work."

A windmill designed to generate electricity stands away from the camp on some rocks as a sentinel. "It worked," said Boise, "but the winds were too strong and it broke."

Grounds explained, "We do not have permission to build any permanent structures and we don't intend to."

The land has been lent to them by Nancy Hamon of Dallas, Tex. A former Belvedere resident, Mrs. Hamon is to stay this summer at the home of Chester Bowles Jr. in Tiburon, Grounds said. "She bought the land to preserve at least one portion of the Tiburon Peninsula from subdivision," the sculptor added.

The rolling hills are dotted with sculpture, much of it made from old automobiles. The largest, a "Walk in Sculpture," is being created by blond Boise. It is a great, ribbed octopus of pipe and metal. Boise says he plans to cover it with automobile metal and canvas. It will be his largest sculpture.

"I'm interested in internal sculpture," he said, "not the old decorative type."

OTHER SCULPTURES include one by Grounds which is of welded steel and, though rusted, has withstood the elements on a rocky promontory for two years.

Also in the collection are sculptures made of automobile valves, ceramics, and "found sculptures," such as one-half an airplane propellor standing upright.

Guarding the camp are two dogs, Paz, a large German shepherd, and Vumba, a smaller dog, plus a black and white cat, named Cat. Paz,

Two Young Sculptors Attempt To Express Their Identities

Grounds is single and has been camping on the knoll occasionally for two years. Boise joined Grounds two months ago. He is married, his wife, Lonny, and four children live in Tiburon. Mrs. Boise, a poet, writes under the name Lonny Lonnergan.

Other artists are expected to join the sculptors this summer, Grounds said.

Mrs. Boise supplies the men with home-made bread, which they eat with honey and coffee.

In the camp, the artistic is given priority over the materialistic every time. For instance: Some pipes originally brought in to be part of a line to carry water from a spring.

Boise found his artistic nature attracted and challenged by the bends and lines of the pipe. So he wound up welding them into a mammoth steel, cloth and glass abstract on the hillside. And there's still no water in the camp.

Grounds has planted 250 trees, one group in a figure "V" to fend off winds. The pair have also built a stove, welded from an old oil drum. They built a bunk in a tree, and created paths, wooden steps and benches.

BOTH SCULPTORS object strongly to what they term "tearing down the hills" by developers. Grounds, who has finished his fourth year in architecture at University of California, explains he is not happy with present day architectural solutions. He disdains the stereotype boxlike home, saying, "I don't believe there is just one solution . . . there are many valid solutions.

"I'm deeply concerned that man in this huge juggernaut of society wants to desperately express himself as an individual. Everyone has an ego, an id. Ron and I are attempting to express our identity, perhaps selfishly."

On the subject of old automobiles for sculptures, Boise says: "Tin is stimulating and fascinating. I don't like any other media. Nothing else has such plasticity. Besides, the automobile is a thing of our time. To take a junked auto and create a work of art from it is something that is entirely of this era which is our time on earth."

YOU AND YOUR INSURANCE

LICENSE BONDS BENEFIT BOTH BUSINESSMAN AND COMMUNITY

A reader asks, what assurance he has that an electrician licensed by the city will do his work properly and abide by the terms of his governmental permit.

While we trust a licensed electrician and have faith in the company that collects our garbage, many cities and other government agencies require that the holders of such licenses also have a license bond. This bond, actually, is nothing more than a promise to comply with the law. It eliminates the need for the businessman to post a cash deposit and thereby frees working capital. It also reduces governmental bookkeeping.

But most important for you, who may employ the services of a licensed technician or do business in a licensed shop, is the bonded guarantee that the license will follow the regulations outlined by law and not abuse the privileges of the permit.

In recent years the growing complexity of American business has brought a marked increase in the use of license bonds. The Surety Association of America reports that more than 50,000 governmental units in the United States administer laws under which license bonds may be required.

Surety license bonds are issued for varying periods of time. In many communities plumbers, electricians and other service contractors must file bonds annually. Building or road contractors, in addition to providing performance and payment bonds, often must file license bonds for special projects such as blasting, street obstruction and sewer work. License bonds may also be required for such diverse undertakings as hanging or maintaining signs, staging fireworks displays or for performing underground construction.

This book for the 5-to-7year-olds is an exception to the "picture book" rule. The text, Newman's delightful and nonsensical poetry, actually outshines the illustrations, although Sheila Greenwald's two-color drawings are quite excellent.

It represents Newman's last writing before his death, and it permitted him once again to display the wonderful feeling he has for catchy rhymes that children delight, not only in hearing, but also in repeating for themselves.

This is the story of a little boy who: "One summer day I had nothing to do, and nothing to look at very new." What he does wind up doing is to go on a fanciful shopping trip to a most unusual supermarket. Tots are certain to rock with hilarity at his antics and peculiar shopping selections.

The section entitled "Clark Island Ballads' has the rhythm and the narrative qualities of folk songs centuries instead of vears old.

MY LIFE ON THE PLAINS by George Armstrong Custer, University of Oklahoma Press, 407 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

In the long wars of attrition by which the American West was wrested from its nomadic natives, most of the romantic leaders wore feathered headdresses and war paint. But no redskin was more romantic than Lt. Col. (brevet Maj. Gen.) George Armstrong Custer in campaign hat, cavalry blue, and long yellow curls.

Also, none had a higher opinion of himself; and certainly no Indian chief-even with the help of interpreters and ghost writers—was able to present his own case so

The dashing Custer made his own legends. The swath he cut in the Civil War was so narrow as to be quickly buried under the rich harvest of derring-do in a conflict that produced a harvest of new heroes with every battle (and new brevet generals almost as abundantly). At that war's end, he was transferred to the much broader-if also much less glorious-field of the plains and mountains of the West. Here he quickly rose to fame.

He conducted only three campaigns. He fought only two major battles. In the first of these, on the Washita, he surprised and almost annihilated his enemy. In the second, on the Little Big Horn, he and his command were surprised and annihilated.

But before the Battle of the Little Big Horn made George Custer a martyr, he had made himself a lionized hero. And he had done so largely with a series of magazine articles subsequently published in book form as "My Life on the Plains, or Personal Experiences With the Indians."

The University of Oklahoma Press has now brought out a new edition of this long-out-of print book. It is well printed, well bound, well edited and well proof-read, and includes some of the original illustrations. Edgar I. Stewart, author of "Custer's Luck," has written an introduction which fills in certain important details which Custer omitted for obvious reasonsmostly concerning a court martial in which the gallant cavalry leader was found guilty on 26 counts (which cost him less than a year off the army payroll).

Custer's writing is almost as flamboyant as the man himself. Here is an original source book of western history that is fun to read!

MENDELSSOHN: Symphony No. 4 "Italian"; SCHUMANN: Symphony No. 4 in D MinorOtto Klemperer conducting the Philharmonia Orchestra -Angel Stereo S 35629.

The celebrated German conductor, whose "Complete Beethoven Symphonies" (also recorded recently for Angel) is a milestone in phonographic history, here adds another masterful performance to his growing catalog of work for this label.

Italian life as Mendelssohn had experienced it is reflected in this work done by the young genius at the age of 23. The romantic element is strong, but form and orchestration conforms to classical tradition.

On the flip side of the disc is another "Romantic No. 4," created in 1841 for Schumann's wife's birthday. The Schumannesque song-like themes chase one another across the four unbroken movements. A brilliant recording in every way.

Camping Under The Redwoods

It's Only One Of The Attractions At Taylor Park

For refreshment of both mind and body, there's nothing like camping under the redwoods. And no better place to do it than Marin's Samuel P. Taylor State Park.

Taylor Park covering 2,500 acres is located on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard 15 miles west of San Rafael.

To overnight campers or day-use-only visitors it offers such attractions as roomy campsites, picnicking facilities, hiking trails, fishing, swimming, abundant wildlife, refuge from the hustle and bustle of the every-day world -and those redwoods.

ADMITTEDLY the really large redwoods are few in number now. Loggers, almost a century before the land became a park back in 1945, felled most of the giants. But there are a large number of second growth trees. And still a few of the really big ones.

Best known of the lot is Pioneer Tree, towering more than 250 feet into the air.

Picnicking facilities in the park number 128 units, each unit consisting of table and stove. For the overnight campers, there are 55 individually numbered campsites sufficient in size to accommodate a tent or small trailer. The usage of each campsite is restricted to two cars and eight people. The camp charge is $1 per vehicle, and there is a limit of 10 days camping per

One large campsite and picnic area is available to groups such as clubs and businesses, but it is booked almost solid for the summer. The other campsites operate on a first come, first served basis, and the rangers will tell you that you will find less congestion and a better choice of sites if you schedule your camping before June and after September.

THE CAMPSITES are kept free of poison oak.

Day use visitors pay a 50 cents per vehicle fee.

It was Samuel Penfield Taylor who gave the park its name. He erected the first paper mill west of the Mississippi in 1856 on what was then known as Daniels Creek -now Paper Mill Creek. It was run by water carried by a flume from a dam on the creek a half mile above the mill. And on that dam Taylor built what is believed to have been the first fish ladder in California.

Taylor's warehouse was located at the end of Tomales Bay. Paper was made from rags which were brought by schooner from San Francisco to the warehouse and then carried on by ox cart to the wildlife are also offered.

As the mill prospered, three residences were built on the

property for members of the Taylor family as well as a carpenter's shop, a blacksmith's shop and a dairy ranch up Devil's Gulch. On Irving Creek there was a fur tannery and for a time a black powder

At the height of his prosperity the Samuel P. Taylor enterprise totalled more than 100 buildings. But Taylor from time to time sold his water rights and was finally left without water to run the mill. He then converted to steam and the mill grew and flourished until the depression of 1893 when it closed.

SOME YEARS later it was destroyed by fire of a mysterious origin. All that remains today is a part of the foundation. The site is marked with a state historical marker.

In the picnic area just beyond the mill site traces of the gardens that once surrounded the homes of the Taylors can still be seen including a palm tree and remnants of an apple orchard.

And where you cross the bridge leading to the camp grounds is a point old-timers still refer to as Camp Taylor, a popular Bay Area resort in its time. There was once a big hotel where the park headquarters now stand.

The Old Swimming Hole on Paper Mill Creek also has a history that dates back more than a century. And park visitors, swimming at their own risk as there is no guard, still make use of the water there.

The old Northwestern Pacific Railroad once carried picnickers to the area, and its old bed is still in use as a road and trail.

The park is especially rich in hiking trails. The visitor can choose the trail to match his stamina.

There is the two and a half mile loop trail from the campsite which takes you past Pioneer Tree. Or a shorter, more primitive trail of a half mile through heavily-wooded Wildcat Canyon. One of the most spectacular walks leads from the park road to the lookout station on Barnabe Peak at 1,500 foot elevation from where you have a birdseye view of the Bay Area. It is a relatively easy walk to the peak which, historians say, was named for Samuel P. Taylor's pet mule.

Or from the campgrounds you can take the old ox trail which follows the old logging skid roads to the Old Swimming Hole on Paper Mill Creek — and the historical area where Taylor's paper mill was once located.

Another trail follows Paper Mill Creek to the same area and you can then loop back and enjoy two differing areas of scenery.

See Marvelous Marin

Or if you like a real challenge, there's a trail for experienced hikers-little more than deer tracks—that leads to Stairstep Falls. And Irving Creek Trail will take you to the west boundary through some unusual scenery.

USE OF ALL these trails is restricted to hikers with no bicycles, scooters or horses allowed.

Riders, however, can make use of the trail from Devil's Gulch that leads from Taylor Park right on to Mount Tamalpais. It is part of the new State Riding and Hiking Trail System.

Fishermen can try their luck in the creek, but will probably be disappointed since most of the fish are fingerlings.

The regular park staff consists of four rangers and two attendants. In summer six additional personnel join the staff to assist in park maintenance. A summer addition is the park naturalist who conducts nature walks daily on a regular schedule.

The walkers will have pointed out to them the varied fauna of the park, points of historical interest and such animal life as deer and raccoon. Fox, skunk and the one mountain lion that reputedly resides in the park remain hidden in the woods. Birdlife is plentiful and abundant. In addition to the redwoods, oaks, madrones, and maples predominate in the forest. Woodwardia ferns, oxalis and azaleas grow along the creek, and you sometimes find the rein orchis blooming beneath the larger stream-bank shrubs.

The naturalist also directs the evening campfire programs which are so popular with the campers.

Park Supervisor Neil Power heads the staff.

VISITORS, HE says, often come from great distances. Many make Taylor Park their headquarters while sightseeing throughout the Bay Area. But a goodly number of Marinites also take advantage of the proximity of the park not only for weekend visits but for vacation camping. And such visitors, on their first trip to Taylor, never fail to express astonishment at the outdoor serenity and beauty that has been available to them at their very doorsteps.

(Editor's Note: This is another in the "See Marvelous Marin" series on Marin places of scenic, recreational, historic and educational interest, prepared in cooperation with radio station KTIM.)

THE STATELY REDWOOD can awe man as it towers over him. Most of the redwoods in Taylor Park are second growth - but still mighty trees.

Mealybugs—Tiny bugs only about one-fifth of an inch long when fully grown. Covered with a white, waxy, mealy covering. Found in clusters along the veins and undersides of leaves and in the crevices at the base of leaf stems. Cause stunting and distortion of leaves.

And now that you know what these garden terrors look like and what they can do to your plants, consult your nurseryman or garden supply dealer on what you should do to thwart their plans. The war between gardener and insect pest is at its hottest right now.

Poor Lawns Aren't Always The Fault Of The Grower

You hear an occasional dissent, but most gardeners agree that the well-groomed lawn does more than anything else to beautify a garden. Despite this agreement, however, it's a fact that every neighborhood has its share of rag tag carpets of green, Poor lawns are sometimes due to neglect, but often as not the owner of a needy lawn works as hard or harder than the man whose lawn is always perfect. He waters frequently, mows methodically, even feeds it, or thinks he does. What, then, makes the difference, and what can be done about it?

IF YOU ASK a nurseryman about this, he'll tell you unequivocally that the big difference in lawns is hidden from the eye. In other words, it's what you have down under the blades of grass that counts, and no amount of fiddling with what's on top will make up for a soil that lacks the basic ingredients of suc-

If you have a spotty lawn, one that never seems to look healthy, wait until after you've watered next time, then take a core of earth and inspect it. Chances are you will find the soil dry below the first inch—an indication that food and water are obviously not getting down to where they do much good. The great need here is for spiking.

Your nurseryman or garden supply dealer can show you the best spiking tool to use and how to use it. After spiking, water a commercial soil conditioner and fertilizer in well and the difference will be apparent in a week's time. Ask your nurseryman to recommend the best conditioner.

ASSUMING THAT the subsurface condition of your lawn is in tolerably good condition, the surface needs only your attention to thrive. And contrary to common practice, you'll find that a little attention, given regularly, goes a lot farther than a lot of attention at infrequent inter-

Feeding lightly every month is far preferable to heavy meals every three months as once was thought to be best. The lawn that is regularly mowed is far easier to keep trim than one which has been let go. Watering, too, should be a regular thing, but you will find that healthy, well-fed lawns need far less water than unhealthy lawns.

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Resist the temptation to remove foliage from springblooming bulbs until it has definitely died back.
- Deciduous shade trees grown in containers may be planted anytime. Your nurseryman can advise you which variety will serve your needs best.
- Use a manure mulch on hibiscus and water the plants frequently. They love the rich soil and moisture which is native to them in the tropics.
- Remove dying blooms from roses before they form seed pods. Remember that picking the blooms encourages continued bloom. For a more attractive shaped plant, cut just above an outside bud if the plant has an upright growth pattern.

CHIMNEY CORNERS

...an inspired collection designed by Bassett to re-create an authentic American style

Native simplicity blends with Colonial aristocracy in this charming group that recaptures the rugged beauty of true Early American. Notice the meticulous attention to authentic detail, exemplified by the simulated rope mattress supports, "cannonball" finials, beveled moldings and graceful turnings. Years of research by Bassett has produced the most complete reproduction of Colonial treasures that have ever been gathered in one group. And only Bassett could do it with such a great appeal to your budget! The Chimney Corners collection includes ninety matched pieces and features Permasheen drawer interiors, Pittsburgh plate glass mirrors and Grand Rapids Guardsman protective coating on honey-toned finish.
